Preface

Since the inception of the Page Program in 1993, its intent has been to provide a learning experience for youth in the legislative process. Our goal is to present educational and historical information to students participating as Pages during the Regular Session of the Legislature.

Among other things in this Page Program Book, students will find an explanation of the rules governing the actions of Senators and Delegates as they deliberate legislation on the Chamber Floors of both houses. There is a diagram which covers the basic overview of how a bill moves through the legislative process on its way to becoming law. Students will also find lists of current Senators and Delegates, an overview of the Standing Committees of the Senate and House of Delegates and instructions on proper etiquette when on the Senate or House Chamber Floors. Maps are included to help students find their way around the Capitol Building.

It is our hope that students serving as Pages find this experience enjoyable, informative and useful in their educational pursuits and that they come away with a better understanding of the legislative process and an interest in effecting positive change in our state.

SENATE PAGE PROGRAM

The West Virginia Senate Page Program has become an integral part of the Senate services to its members and the public. It has been a communications link between the Members of the Senate and our young students.

The Page Program gives students, ages 12-19 years old, from West Virginia's public and nonpublic schools, an opportunity to serve as Pages in the West Virginia Senate during the legislative session. Pages serve Members of the Senate in a nonpartisan capacity. The Program accomplishes the following objectives:

- Provide students with a meaningful and exciting experience in state government;
- Meet and work with other young people, their State Senators and those from different areas of the state;
- Gives students firsthand learning experiences regarding the role of the legislators and their influence in effecting positive change in the state;
- Students share their thoughts and ideas with Members of the Senate as the lawmakers formulate and make decisions affecting every citizen;
- Young people gain a better understanding of state government and the legislative process. They can share this knowledge with others in their respective schools and communities.

EXPLANATION OF THE SENATE'S DAILY ORDER OF BUSINESS

1. To read, correct and approve the Journal.

A daily Journal of the proceedings of the Senate is kept. At the beginning of each day, the Clerk will begin reading the Journal of the previous day. A motion by a senator to approve the Journal will cease the reading.

2. Introduction of guests.

If a Senator has guests who are visiting the Senate, he or she will rise and, once recognized by the President, will introduce his or her guests.

3 To dispose of communications from the House of Delegates and the Executive.

The Senate and House of Delegates have an official way of communicating with each other during a session. These communications are called MESSAGES. These messages from the House of Delegates are read by the Clerk and the appropriate legislative action is taken. Also, under this order of business, the Governor can send communications to the Senate. These are called Executive Messages. Once a message from the Governor has been read, the appropriate legislative action is taken.

4. To receive reports from standing committees.

A standing committee is a group of Senators, along with their chair, who has been appointed by the President to meet on bills sent to their committees. There are 17 standing committees in the Senate. If they have acted favorably on a bill that has been sent to their committee, they must report that action to the full Senate.

5. To receive reports from select committees.

A select committee is a group of Senators appointed by the President to act on issues other than those brought before a standing committee.

6. To receive bills, resolutions, motions and petitions.

Bills and resolutions being introduced in the Senate for the first time are read, and the President will refer the bill to the appropriate committee. Motions are also considered under this order of business, and petitions signed by citizens on a given subject are presented and referred to the appropriate committee.

7. To act upon unfinished business of the preceding day and resolutions lying over from the previous day, and no resolution shall lose its place on the calendar by not being acted upon on the day following that on which it was offered.

Any business that the Senate may have held over from the previous day is considered under this order of business.

8. Senate and House Bills on third reading. (Passage Stage)
Senators will debate and vote on Senate and House Bills.

9. Senate and House Bills on second reading. (Amendment Stage)
Senators or Standing Committees can offer amendments to Senate or House Bills.
10. Senate and House Bills on first reading.
Bills that have been reported from committees are read.
11. Introduction of guests.
If a Senator has guests visiting the Senate, he or she will rise and, once recognized by the President, will introduce his or her guests.
12. Remarks by members of the Senate.
Senators can make remarks regarding any subject.
13. Miscellaneous business.
Matters which are not in the official order of business are considered.

State Executive Offices

These six elected state officers, along with the appointed state superintendent of schools, comprise the Board of Public Works. Each shares a portion of the responsibility of leading, directing and administering state government operations and carrying out laws adopted by the Legislature. Their separate duties create a balance of power within the executive branch.

All candidates for these offices file with the Secretary of State and appear on the ballot in all 55 counties. Each candidate must be a qualified voter – which simply means that the candidate must be eligible to register to vote in West Virginia. Other qualifications are listed.

THE BUDGET PROCESS

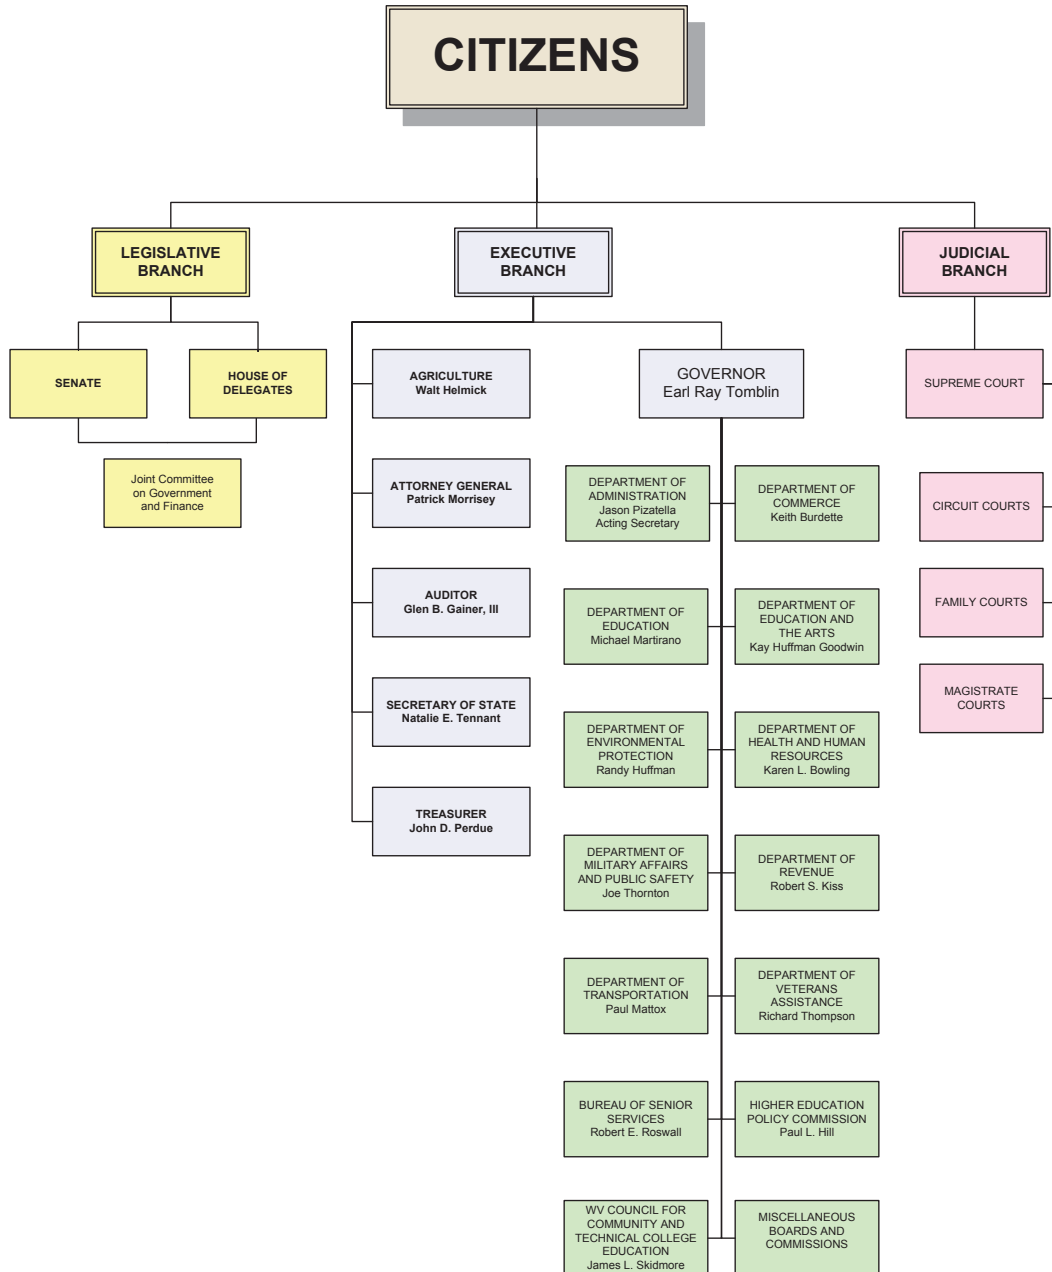

This section is an overview of the Legislative (Senate and House of Delegates) and Executive (Governor) processing of the State Budget before it becomes law.

Every citizen of West Virginia is affected by the budget many times in each fiscal year. It is the single most important bill passed by the Legislature. This bill does not contain power of taxation. However, it is the regulatory device which determines the taxes West Virginians will pay. It determines the level of services the people will receive in any given fiscal year that begins July 1 and expires June 30.

An interesting comparison in the preparation of the Budget Bill with an individual's personal budgeting process gives a better understanding as demonstrated in the following examples:

- Determining essential services
- Financial need for growth
- Availability of finances to meet services and expenses
- Risk involved in determining if new taxes will be assessed

State Profile

History

People have lived in West Virginia as far back as 12,500 years ago, beginning with the Paleo-Indians. The Fort Ancient Indians inhabited the area until 300 years ago when they were driven out by the Iroquois Indians from New York and the great Lakes area. When the first European settlers arrived, all the native American villages were gone, and the area was a hunting ground used by many tribes including the Cherokee, Shawnee, and Iroquois.

The first permanent European settlement dates from 1731 when Morgan Morgan founded Mill Creek. In 1742, coal was discovered on the Coal River, an event that would be of great significance in determining West Virginia's future.

West Virginia shares its history with Virginia from 1609 to 1861 until Virginia seceded from the Union in 1861. Then the delegates of 40 western counties formed their own government, which was granted statehood in 1863. Declared a state by President Abraham Lincoln, West Virginia is the only state to be designated by Presidential Proclamation.

Capital City

The State Legislature designated Charleston as the capital city in 1870. Kanawha county citizens provided a passenger boat to move all state records to their new home in Charleston.

In 1875, the Legislature voted to return the capital to Wheeling. Although state officials boarded steamers on May 21 to journey to Wheeling, State archives and records did not arrive until late September, causing state government to be at a standstill for four months.

WEST VIRGINIA STATE FLAG

By Senate Joint Resolution Number 18, approved by the Legislature March 7, 1929, West Virginia adopted the present State flag. The resolution in part is as follows: "That the Legislature of West Virginia hereby adopts a State flag of the following design and proportions, to-wit:

The proportions of the flag of the State of West Virginia shall be the same as those of the United States ensign; the field shall be pure white, upon the center of which shall be emblazoned in proper colors, the coat-of-arms of the State of West Virginia upon which appears the date of the admission of the State into the Union, also with the motto, 'Montani Semper Liberi' (Mountaineers Are Always Free). Above the coat-of-arms of the State of West Virginia there shall be a ribbon lettered, 'State of West Virginia,' and arranged appropriately around the lower part of the coat-of-arms of the State of West Virginia a wreath of RHODODENDRON MAXIMUM in proper colors. The field of pure white shall be bordered by a strip of blue on four sides. The flag of the State of West Virginia when used for parade purposes shall be trimmed with gold colored fringe on three sides and when used on ceremonial occasions with the United States ensign, shall be trimmed and mounted in similar fashion to the United States flag as regards fringe, cord, tassels and mounting."

STATE FLOWER

The RHODODENDRON MAXIMUM, or "big laurel", is the State flower of West Virginia. It was selected on January 23, 1903, by a joint resolution of both houses of the Legislature, following a vote by pupils of the public schools. It is a shrub of the heath family and may be recognized by its large evergreen leaves and delicate pale pink or white bloom, mottled with either red or yellow flecks.

STATE TREE

The Sugar Maple, ACER SACCARUM as it is known scientifically, was made West Virginia's official tree by a concurrent resolution of the 1949 Legislature. It provides an excellent wood for furniture and produces a maple syrup. A single tree is 70-120 feet high and produces two to three pounds of sugar when "sugared off". It has a five-lobed leaf and a small wing-shaped seed pod.

STATE BIRD

The Cardinal was made West Virginia's official bird by concurrent resolution of the 1949 Legislature. The male of the species is a rich scarlet with mask and shading of black, while the young birds and females are a less brilliant color. The cardinal measures approximately eight inches long and is found from New York State to the Gulf of Mexico and as far west as Oklahoma. His scientific name is CARDINALIS CARDINALIS.

STATE ANIMAL

The Black Bear or EUARCTOS AMERICANUS, is actually deeply tinted with brown. His habitat in West Virginia is primarily in the Eastern Mountain Region. He still roams freely throughout 36 states and Canada. Either one or two cubs, rarely three, are born at a time, weighing about eight ounces each. The adult reaches an average maximum weight of 250 pounds.

THE GREAT SEAL OF WEST VIRGINIA

OBVERSE

Joseph H. Diss Debar, an artist from Doddridge County, was chosen by a committee of the Legislature to prepare drawings for an official seal for the State of West Virginia. The artist submitted his drawings with an explanation of each detail and from these was adopted, by the Legislature, a seal which has remained without change, the Official Seal of West Virginia. The seal contains the Latin motto, Montani Semper Liberi, which means Mountaineers Are Always Free. A large stone in the center of the seal stands for strength. On the stone is the date on which the State was admitted to the Union, June 20, 1863. The farmer with his axe represents agriculture and the miner with his pick represents industry. In front of

REVERSE

The illustrations shown are of the obverse and reverse of the Great Seal impressed on indented waters as affixed to official papers by the Secretary of State.

The Less Seal of the State is the same as the Great Seal except in dimensions and the Secretary of State is, by statute, the keeper of this seal also.

WEST VIRGINIA FACT SHEET

CONSTITUTION

(Preamble) “Since through Divine Providence we enjoy the blessings of civil, political and religious liberty, we, the people of West Virginia, in and through the provisions of this Constitution, reaffirm our faith in and constant reliance upon God and seek diligently to promote, preserve and perpetuate good government in the State of West Virginia for the common welfare, freedom and security of ourselves and our posterity.” (This preamble was proposed by House Joint Resolution No. 8, Acts 1959, Page 659; submitted by Acts 1960, c-4; and ratified November 8, 1960.)

West Virginia adopted its first constitution in 1863, when it became the 35th state in the Union. The state is now governed by its second constitution, adopted in 1872. The constitution may also be revised by a constitutional convention. Before a constitutional convention can be called, it must be approved by a majority of the legislators and the voters.

EXECUTIVE

The governor of West Virginia is the state’s chief executive and is elected to a four-year term. He may serve any number of terms, but not more than two terms in succession.

In case of the death, conviction or impeachment, failure to qualify, resignation, or other disability of the governor, the president of the Senate shall act as governor until the vacancy is filled, or the disability removed; and if the president of the Senate, for any of the above-named causes, shall become incapable of performing the duties of governor, the same shall revolve upon the speaker of the House of Delegates; and in all other cases where there is no one to act as governor, one shall be chosen by joint vote of the Legislature. Whenever a vacancy shall occur in the office of the governor before the first three years of the term shall have expired, a new election for governor shall take place to fill the vacancy.

The heads of many state administrative departments are appointed by the governor with the advice and consent of the Senate.

Other top state officials include the Secretary of State, Auditor, Treasurer, Attorney General, and the Commissioner of Agriculture. They are elected to a four-year term and can succeed themselves as many times as they are elected.

LEGISLATURE

The Legislature of West Virginia consists of a Senate and House of Delegates. The voters of each of the state's 17 senatorial districts elect two senators to four-year terms--with the exception of Kanawha County which elects four senators. Each of the state's 56 delegate districts elects 1 to 17 delegates, depending upon population.

The legislature meets every year. Regular sessions begin on the second Wednesday of January, except in the year after an election for governor. In that year, the regular session starts on the second Wednesday of February. Sixty calendar days is the regular session; however, it may be extended by a concurrent resolution adopted by a two-thirds vote of the members elected to each house. The governor may call extraordinary sessions.

COURTS

There are three levels of courts--Supreme Court of Appeals, Circuit Court and Magistrate or "peoples' court". The highest court in West Virginia is the Supreme Court of Appeals which has five Justices, who are elected to 12-year terms. Beginning with the January, 1980, term and continuing thereafter, on the first day of the January term of each year, a Chief Justice is selected from the members of the court in accordance with the justices' seniority.

There are 31 Judicial Circuits and each has at least one circuit judge. Circuit judges are elected for a term of eight years.

Magistrates are elected to a four-year term and their salaries, which are set by the Legislature, depend upon the population of the county in which they serve. Each county has at least two magistrates.

COUNTY GOVERNMENT

Counties are governed by county commissions which have executive, legislative and some quasi-judicial functions. County commissioners, county clerks, and circuit clerks are elected for six-year terms. Other county officials include a prosecuting attorney, who is the county's chief law-enforcement officer; an assessor; a sheriff; and a surveyor, who are elected for four-year terms.

G OVERNORS OF WEST VIRGINIA

1863-69	Arthur Ingram Boreman was the first governor of West Virginia. At the outbreak of the Civil War, he presided over the Wheeling Convention which formed a reorganized government of Virginia in an effort to remain loyal to the Union. He resigned near the end of his term to serve in the U. S. Senate.
Feb. 26, 1869 to March 4, 1869	Daniel Duane Tompkins Farnsworth, a strong supporter of statehood, served six days between the resignation of Boreman (who became U. S. Senator) and the inauguration of newly-elected Governor Stevenson.
1869-71	William Erskine Stevenson encouraged the repeal of loyalty test oath laws for former Confederates and restored their right to vote.
1871-77	John Jeremiah Jacob attempted to settle differences between Union advocates and Confederate sympathizers. During his first term in office our state constitution was written and adopted.
1877-81	Henry Mason Mathews was elected to the State Senate but because he had served in the Confederate Army, he refused to take the loyalty test oath and failed to qualify for his seat. He was elected governor after the loyalty test oath laws were repealed. Mathews repeatedly called for federal and state troops to put down mine and rail strikes in the state.
1881-85	Jacob Beeson Jackson, a partisan Democrat, was an advocate of tax reform. He increased property values to provide funds for state institutions.
1885-90	Emanuel Willis Wilson served almost a year beyond his term due to a disputed election. He opposed unfair railroad practices and general monopolies.
1890-93	Aretas Brooks Fleming was one of four men who claimed the governor's seat in a disputed election. The Australian ballot law providing for uniform printed ballots was enacted during his term.
1893-97	William Alexander MacCorkle, elected governor at the age of 35, tirelessly promoted West Virginia. His term was troubled by a series of labor problems with the railroads and the mines.

1897-1901	George Wesley Atkinson asked the Legislature for the eight-hour work day, a child labor law, and proper working conditions for women.
1901-05	Albert Blakeslee White was obsessed with the state's faulty tax structure and he pushed for reforms.
1905-09	William Mercer Owens Dawson proposed a tax program to increase State revenues. Dawson recommended building a new capitol, condemning the old one as a firetrap.
1909-13	William Ellsworth Glasscock declared martial law when the mine wars began in 1912. Labor unrest continued throughout his term.
1913-17	Henry Hatfield pushed for one of the first workmen's compensation laws in the nation. He personally dealt with mine owners and laborers in an attempt to resolve the mine wars.
1917-21	John Jacob Cornwell created a state police force in response to violence at the mines. Voters approved $50 million to pave dirt roads.
1921-25	Ephraim Franklin Morgan pushed for highway safety laws and established a road commission. During his term, the mine wars came to an end in 1923.
1925-29	Howard Mason Gore raised funds for road construction with an increase in the gasoline tax. Voters approved another $35 million for highways.
1929-33	William Gustavus Conley held office during the depression. Much of the legislation enacted under his administration was concerned with poor economic conditions.
1933-37	Herman Guy Kump put the state and its citizens back on a firm financial footing by adopting the state's first consumers sales tax, a personal income tax and by creating the Department of Public Assistance.
1937-41	Homer Adams Holt was anti-labor and quickly asserted his authority when unions threatened strikes. Economic conditions improved during his term in office.
1941-45	Matthew Mansfield Neely, an uncompromising Democrat, was friend of labor. His administration increased mine inspections, created a Human Relations Commission, and increased welfare grants.

1945-49	Clarence Watson Meadows reorganized many state agencies to make them less political and more efficient. He took personal action in resolving strikes and fought for a raise for the state's teachers.
1949-53	Okey Leonidas Patteson located the state medical school at Morgantown. He pledged cash bonuses for the veterans of WWI and WWII and passed new taxes on beer, wine and cigarettes to fulfill those pledges.
1953-57	William Casey Marland introduced a tax on natural resource industries to fund roads and school programs, but the tax was defeated in the Legislature. He supported school integration.
1957-61	Cecil Harland Underwood, youngest governor to be elected, enacted a temporary employment program as mechanization in the coal mines threw thousands into poverty. He battled a Democratic Legislature as the first Republican governor in 24 years.
1961-65	William Wallace Barron experienced an unemployment decline from more than 100,000 to less than 45,000 and the state park system was expanded.
1965-69	Hulett Carlson Smith worked for the legislation to control strip mine operations and pollution. State employees were placed under civil service coverage and the restoration of the Governor's Mansion was completed.
1969-77	Arch Alfred Moore, Jr., served two terms marked by advances in road construction, welfare, education and mental health.

CASS GILBERT, ARCHITECT OF THE CAPITOL
Born November 29, 1887, Zanesville, Ohio
Died May 17, 1934, Brockenhurst, England
Buried June 3, 1934, Fairlawn Cemetery, Ridgefield, NY

The history of the State Capitol began in Wheeling, where the Linsly Institute Building, constructed in 1858, served as the state's first Capitol building from June 20, 1863 to April 1, 1870.

The legislature later voted to move the Capitol south to Charleston. A shift in economic and political power from Republican to Democrat and from northern to southern directly influenced the decision to move the seat of government to Charleston. A packed boat floated the state's officials and documents down the Ohio River and east on the Kanawha River to the new Capitol. State officials took up residence in churches, schools and other available buildings while a new, three-story building was being constructed at Capitol and Lee streets in downtown Charleston.

In 1875, a group of Wheeling businessmen enticed the legislature with a free public building to return the capitol to Wheeling. The government moved by boat back to Wheeling. Officials settled into the Linsly Institute building, and then into a stone structure donated by Wheeling.

Still not satisfied with the choice of Wheeling, the 1877 Legislature decided to ask the citizens of West Virginia to vote on the permanent location of their Capitol. West Virginians were offered the cities of Charleston, Clarksburg, or Martinsburg. They chose Charleston.

When the new Capitol was completed in 1885, state officials and records were again transported from Wheeling on the Ohio and Kanawha Rivers, this time on two steamers and a barge. West Virginia's seat of government became known as the "floating Capitol."

The new building served as the State Capitol for 36 years until, on January 3, 1921, it was destroyed by fire. Thousands of rounds of ammunition confiscated in recent conflicts in the coalfields added fuel to the blaze. A temporary structure of wood and wallboard was hastily erected in 42 days. For the next six years, West Virginia's state government was run from the "pasteboard Capitol."

The make-shift Capitol went up in flames on March 2, 1927. After the 1921 fire, the Legislature had created the Capitol Building Commission which authorized construction of the present Capitol on the North bank of the Kanawha River in East Charleston.

The present Capitol took eight years to complete at a cost of just under $10 million. It was constructed in three stages. The west wing was built in 1924-25; the east wing was constructed in 1926-27; and the rotunda connecting the wings was completed in 1930-32. Governor William G. Conley dedicated the new Capitol on the state's 69th birthday, June 20, 1932.

Cass Gilbert, born in Zanesville, Ohio in 1859, studied architecture at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. In 1912, Gilbert designed the world's first skyscraper, the Woolworth Building in New York City. His other works include the state capitols of Minnesota and Arkansas, the U. S. Treasury Building and the U. S. Supreme Court Building in Washington, D.C.. Gilbert died in 1934, just two years after West Virginia's State Capitol was completed.

The huge bell resting on the Capitol lawn is a grim reminder of the disastrous fire of 1921 that destroyed the statehouse built in 1885. The bell for years tolled the time for hundreds of townspeople and there was more than a passing touch of sorrow in its fall to the ground, causing a crack extending almost around its surface.

The figure "3" of the clock tower that housed the bell was salvaged from the ruins and presented to the Department of Archives and is now in display in the museum.

Weighing several tons, the bell was cast by the Clinton H. Meneely Company of Troy, N.Y. in 1887. The State Board of Public Works accepted the bell July 7, 1888.

The White House

The seal of the president of the United States includes an eagle holding arrows and an olive branch. The branch symbolizes the desire for peace, and the arrows represent the ability to wage war. The 50 stars stand for the 50 U.S. states.

President of the United States

President of the United States is often considered the most powerful elected official in the world. The president leads a nation of great wealth and military strength. Presidents have often provided decisive leadership in times of crisis, and they have shaped many important events in history.

The Constitution of the United States gives the president enormous power. However, it also limits that power. The authors of the Constitution wanted a strong leader as president, but they did not want an all-powerful king. As a result, they divided the powers of the United States government among three branches—executive, legislative, and judicial. The president, who is often called the chief executive, heads the executive branch. Congress represents the legislative branch. The Supreme Court of the United States and other federal courts make up the judicial branch. Congress and the Supreme Court may prevent or end any presidential action that exceeds the limits of the president's powers and trespasses on their authority.

The president has many roles and performs many du-

The candidate must also be at least 35 years old and must have lived in the United States for at least 14 years. No law or court decision has yet defined the exact meaning of natural-born. Authorities assume the term applies to citizens born in the United States and its territories. But they are not sure if it also includes children born to United States citizens in other countries.

How elected: By a majority vote of the Electoral College, held in December following the general election on the first Tues-

Inauguration: Held at noon on January 20 after election. If January 20 is a Sunday, the ceremony may be held privately that day and again in public on January 21.

Term: The president is elected to a four-year term. A president may not be elected more than twice.

Income: The president receives a yearly salary of $400,000. In addition, the president receives a $50,000 annual allowance for expenses, and additional allowances for travel, staff support, and White House maintenance.

History of the American Flag

According to popular legend, the first American flag was made by Betsy Ross, a Philadelphia seamstress who was acquainted with George Washington, leader of the Continental Army, and other influential Philadelphians. In May 1776, so the story goes, General Washington and two representatives from the Continental Congress visited Ross at her upholstery shop and showed her a rough design of the flag. Although Washington initially favored using a star with six points, Ross advocated for a five-pointed star, which could be cut with just one quick snip of the scissors, and the gentlemen were won over.

Unfortunately, historians have never been able to verify this charming version of events, although it is known that Ross made flags for the navy of Pennsylvania. The story of Washington's visit to the flag maker became popular about the time of the country's first centennial, after William Canby, a grandson of Ross, told about her role in shaping U.S. history in a speech given at the Philadelphia Historical Society in March 1870.

What is known is that the first unofficial, national flag, called the Grand Union Flag or the Continental Colours, was raised at the request of General Washington near his headquarters outside Boston, Mass., on January 1, 1776. The flag had 13 alternating red and white horizontal stripes and the British Union Flag (a predecessor of the Union Jack) in the canton. Another early flag had a rattlesnake and the motto "Don't Tread on Me."

The first official national flag, also known as the Stars and Stripes, was approved by the Continental Congress on June 14, 1777. The blue canton contained 13 stars, representing the original 13 colonies, but the layout varied. Although nobody knows for sure who designed the flag, it may have been Continental Congress member Francis Hopkinson.

After Vermont and Kentucky were admitted to the Union in 1791 and 1792, respectively, two more stars and two more stripes were added in 1795. This 15-star, 15-stripe flag was the "star-spangled banner" that inspired lawyer Francis Scott Key to write the poem that later became the U.S. national anthem.

In 1818, after five more states had gained admittance, Congress passed legislation fixing the number of stripes at 13 and requiring that the number of stars equal the number of states. The last new star, bringing the total to 50, was added on July 4, 1960, after Hawaii became a State.

Respect For The Flag

When marching carry the flag on the right side or centered and in front of other flags. The flag is normally not dipped.

Fly the flag above any other flag, or on the flag's own right side if all the same height. If flags are in a semicircle, fly the American flag above the other, in the center.

On a single flagstaff, fly the American flag at the top, so it will be hoisted first and lowered last.

From a building, the union will be at the peak, if from a rope, the same, with the union first out of the building.

Place the flag against a wall, with the union at the top, to the flag's own right, your left when looking at it.

If the flag is flown over a street, the union should be to the north or east depending on the direction of the street.

If mounted on a staff, the American flag will be to the right of the speaker and to the left of those looking at it.

On special days, the flag may be flown at half-staff. On Memorial Day it is flown at half-staff until noon, then it is raised to the top of the flag pole.

Federal Flag Code

This pamphlet contains the rules that are found in the Federal Flag Code, revised. The United States flag is considered to be a living symbol representing our country. In addition, the flag represents the many freedoms, rights, and responsibilities entrusted to the citizens of this country. Therefore, the proper display and use of the American flag is the responsibility of every American. The flag code is simply a guideline for proper display of, and honor to, our flag. There are no penalties for violation of the provisions of the Code. However, State and federal law may apply to specific acts against the flag.

You Do

1. Display the flag from sunrise to sunset.
If displayed after sunset, the flag should be illuminated.
2. Raise the flag briskly and lower the flag slowly.
3. Fly all-weather flag, if the weather is bad.
4. Fly the flag on all designated days, like the Fourth of July. These are suggested days of historic meaning. You can fly it every day of the year.
5. Fly the flag every day at all public buildings.
6. Fly the flag where people vote on election day.

Description of the Flag

The flag of the United States has 13 stripes, seven red and six white, with red on the top and bottom. The stripes represent the 13 original colonies that became the first 13 states.

The blue field (the union) with 50 stars is located next to the staff in the upper left corner of the flag. It extends from the top of the flag to the lower edge of the fourth red stripe. The stars are arranged in alternating rows of six and five, representing the 50 states of the United States.
